> Gentlemen,
> On your website you describe your Prosciutto as "
> Each Daniele prosciutto is handpicked in the United States using > exacting standards. After applying all-natural ingredients - the > highest quality salt and pepper - the prosciutto are aged for nine to > fifteen months. Our expert staff reviews each prosciutto individually > to determine which is ready for sale. The process is lengthy but it > ensures that every slice has a consistently sweet - never salty - > flavor and a delicate, pink color."
> Unfortunately, the package I purchased this Friday at BJ's in Westbury > was not even close to being the product you so proudly refer to.
> Well made Proscuitto should be delicate in texture and color with no > hint of salt. The fat in the slices should be soft as if it came from > a very young hog. Unfortunately, the prosciutto I found in your > package was thick, tough, chewy, salty and dark red in color. No > resemblance to the product from Daniele that I have been enjoying ever > since visiting La Casa Del Prosciutto San Daniele Del Friuli in Italy > over 6 years ago. Ever since then I have become a fan of San Daniele, > preferring it over Parma. However, this product, made domestically, is > a very poor representation of the original and serious consideration > should be made to improve its quality without delay.
> The only makings on the package besides the nutrition facts are "Deli > Prosciutto BJ#212092 UPC# 736436835021 Net wt. 10 oz. $5.99", which I > provide should you wish to check further on your quality control.
> Sincerely,

INVESTIGATIVE REPORT

TO: Stuart E. Benson, Esq.
FROM: Kirk A. Hornbeck
RE: Daniele order

As requested, on January 29, 2007 I placed an on-line order at www.danielefoods.com for one (1) Daniele Family Pack and one (1) President's Prosciutto. I received the delivery on February 2, 2007, but the delivery did not contain a President's Prosciutto but a package of "Daniele Prosciutto" in its place.

Digital and hard-copy pictures are attached along with the original product. Our file remains open.
